Abe,

If Laura and I are to draft your wedding announcement we will need material on your Mom and Dad's background or even Grandparents if they create a hook.

Thank you,

j

Laura and Jamie:

Thank you for the Hollywood Bowl tickets. I'm really excited to go.

With regard to getting a New York Times wedding announcement for Benno and Abe, it does not cost anything, and please see below advice from my friend's mom who succeeded in the process. Please note you need to describe both sets of parents, including Abe's, who I understand have not been very tolerant. So they would be listed forever on the internet in a gay wedding announcement on the NYT website. And wouldn't that be lovely! ;)

"Hi Rory! The Times has pointers on what you need to submit, including a pic of the couple where their eyebrows are on the same level! You need to submit all details at least six weeks prior. With Seth and Arielle, I felt there was enough to make them stand out. Interracial, Seth's academic history and job, and Arielle's dad was with the foreign service. You need to find an interesting catch - like a very unusual wedding location, or push the academic "h bombs", an interesting tidbit about the family - even if it's a grandparent. The parents' jobs can help if they are particularly interesting. Dan and I were just normal - but her father had the government connection even tho it was not on a very senior level. It's worth a try..."
