Gentlemen,

I became an ordained Minister in order to officiate at your wedding in 2019.

It has been an incredible ride and to top it off I had the pleasure of enjoying Ari's amazing Birthday Party with you today!

Congratulations & Tons of Love & Hugs,
GOP

Anniversary Welcome

Greetings Rev. James B Rosenwald III,

Here's a milestone worth celebrating: it's now been 6 years since you officially became an ordained minister! As we raise a virtual glass to this exciting occasion, we just wanted to reach out and see how things are going. Have you been able to take full advantage of your status as a legally ordained minister?

Regardless of how you put your ordination to use, we've worked hard to ensure all the information and materials you need are available on our website. Our primary goal is – and always has been – to help you conquer any challenges that come your way and assist you in making the universe a better place. Don't forget to explore the site and get familiar with these resources available to you!

You've been ordained for some time, so there's a good chance that you're a pro at this by now. You've probably officiated a ceremony (or two, or twenty) and are comfortable with the process. That said, there are always opportunities to up your game. For example, have you considered a colorful wardrobe addition? If you'd like to add a bit of flair to your clergy outfit, consider picking up an official ULC stole!

We're always looking for ways to expand our resources and better serve the needs of our ministers. In addition to the many apparel options available in our catalog, we've also created some specific pages to help you navigate the world of weddings and be the best marriage officiant you can be. Check them out!

We opened this message talking about milestones, and we use that term for a reason. A milestone marks an important point on a larger journey, not the conclusion of a journey. Similarly, the work of a minister is never complete. No matter how many weddings you officiate, baptisms you perform, or funerals you preside over, there will always be more to learn.

As you continue to refine your craft and become more deeply involved in your community, don't worry about trying to be perfect – those who seek perfection rarely attain it. Instead, seek improvement. Those who most consistently find success simply work to be a little better tomorrow than they were yesterday. We're honored to stand by your side as you continue this lifelong journey, and know that we'll be here to provide assistance however we are able.

In peace,

Sister Jeanne

P.S. If you've had a positive experience becoming ordained through the ULC, we'd love it if you could help us spread the word about our organization! We want to give as many people as possible the chance to follow their unique spiritual path, so if you have the time, it would mean a lot to us if you could leave a review on our Google profile to help others learn about the ULC.
